I started working with SM Engineering about a year ago. It's been a worry free experience. The initial presentation was very well done. I was able to speak with current clients without hassle. Once they review your utility bills, there is high probability you are being over charged in some way, shape or form. SM handles all of the leg work with the utilities and the state. They are able to review past billing as well and will get back as much as possible. The best part happens once you receive that first credit check from the state/utility in the mail. They share all information as it happens, so there are no surprises. I highly recommend SM Engineering.

Sincerely,

Chris Weber
